Parents Can Feed Their Children, Thanks to You
How time flies! Summertime is just around the corner, and most kids in Middle Tennessee know what that means — a few carefree months of fun in the sun. I know when I was a kid I spent as much time as I could outside, at the pool and with friends.

But a lot of children won’t have the energy to do those kinds of activities. That’s because they lose access to free school meals when the cafeteria doors close for the summer. That means thousands of boys and girls — particularly those in rural Tennessee — will start off summer with empty refrigerators... and empty stomachs. And without food, they won’t have the fuel to run and play.

Thankfully, there’s a solution — you. With the help of your gifts to Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee, we’re able to support summer programs like Project Reflect. On page 8, I can’t wait for you to read what Allison Driver, our executive director, has to say about the amazing work you’re making possible!

Because of you, the children and families you’ll read about in this issue of Table Topics will have access to nutritious meals this summer. Their stories are just a small sampling of the major impact you’re making in our community every day.

As we work together to create a Hunger Free Summer, by providing 4 million meals to children and families in need, I hope I can continue to count on your generosity today and in the months ahead. Thank you from the bottom of my heart!

Sincerely,

President & CEO
Jaynee K. Day

You're Helping Feed a Struggling Family

Today, Miranda is visiting the Our Lady of Guadalupe perishable food distribution with her mom, Joni, and her 15-month-old daughter, Elli. As they take turns holding little Elli, Miranda and Joni explain that life has been really tough lately.

Struggling with chronic illness, Joni is disabled, waiting for an organ transplant — and unable to work. Still, Miranda’s been doing the best she can to make ends meet at a local restaurant while balancing a demanding college schedule.

Because of her health condition, Joni has to watch what she eats. This means the family has to be extra careful about what they pick up from the grocery store, which isn’t much given the family’s mounting medical bills and other expenses each month.

To help fill in the gap, Miranda applied to the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program, which helps provide some of the nutritious food little Elli needs. But it’s still not enough to supplement their tight food budget. That’s where Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee’s perishable food distribution and friends like you come in.

Thanks to your support of Second Harvest, Miranda is able to bring home nutrient-rich staple foods — including plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. She’s so grateful that you provide the wholesome meals her mother and Elli need to keep them as healthy as possible.

Without Second Harvest, Miranda doesn’t know what she’d do. It’s tough to raise a child while working and going to school. With time though, she knows her efforts will pay off with a job that will produce more income for her family. For now, she’s thankful for friends like you who are watching out for her.

“I appreciate your donations,” says Miranda. “This gives us a sense of security.”

Volunteer Spotlight: Gabby and Scott Dannemiller

Gabby and Scott Dannemiller live in Franklin with their two lively children — Jake, 10, and Audrey, 8. As big believers in volunteerism, the couple wanted to find a place where they could serve as a family. After careful thought, they chose Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee. As volunteers, Gabby, Scott and their kids have spent much of their time dedicated to helping with the BackPak Program — preparing and organizing food for schoolchildren. During one of their shifts, they assembled 750 BackPacks, which they later learned was only a fraction of the weekly goal at Second Harvest — a reminder of the great need in the community for this program.

On the ride home from one of their workdays, Gabby recalls a discussion she and her husband had with the kids. They talked about the BackPacks and how much the boys and girls who would later receive them relied on them for their weekend meals.

Understanding that there was a child just like them that counted on each backpack really gave Jake and Audrey perspective on the important work they were doing together as a family.

In addition to volunteering their time, Gabby and Scott are also financial supporters of Second Harvest. They do this because they know their gifts will be used to make the greatest possible impact right here in Middle Tennessee.

“We are humbled and honored to be a small part of working to end hunger with this great organization,” Gabby says, extending an invitation for others to give back in whatever way they are able. “You get much more than you give!”

We want to extend a special thank you to the Dannemiller family for being so willing to serve our hungry neighbors — including the thousands of boys and girls who benefit from the BackPack Program.

“We were humbled and honored to be a small part of working to end hunger with this great organization,” Gabby says, extending an invitation for others to give back in whatever way they are able. “You get much more than you give!”

Keith, an employee at a local big-box store, and his wife Arlene, a retired Army veteran, are raising two children together — Kahri, 4, and Kizia, 12. While school is out, they worry they will not have enough food for their kids.

After 23 years of military service, Arlene is disabled and living on a fixed income. Though Keith’s job helps them cover most of their expenses, an unexpected illness has put him out of work. With less money to buy groceries over the next few months, their family has run out of options.

Right now, medical bills are eating up their budget. For just one of the weeks Keith was in the hospital, the family received a bill for nearly $190,000!

When the children are in school, the free breakfasts and lunches they receive in the cafeterias bring some relief. But during the summer, since these meals won’t be available, Keith and Arlene will have to find a way to replace them.

Thankfully, they found help at the Veterans Administration when Arlene’s caseworker referred her to the Salvation Army in Nashville, the closest Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee Partner Agency to their home.

“If we didn’t have this to fall back on, I don’t know what we would do,” Keith says.

With time, Keith and Arlene know they will be able to pay down their medical bills. But until that happens, neither of them can thank you enough for the help you’re providing their family this summer.

“May God bless you,” Arlene says. “We’re thankful for all the help and support.”

We’re thankful for all the help and support.

You’re Feeding the Future at Project Reflect

Project Reflect has served the needs of Tennessee children living in poverty since 1992. In addition to providing high-impact education programs, this Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee Partner Agency also offers healthy after-school and summer meals to the boys and girls who attend these programs.

Allison Driver, the executive director at Project Reflect, says that more than 100 children — kindergarteners to 4th graders — rely on the food provided by the program. And that’s possible only through the support of Second Harvest — and caring friends like you.

“The collaboration we have ensures that when the students are with us, they are getting nutritious, healthy meals,” says Allison.

In addition, Allison and the team use the meals as teaching tools. When parents see the link between a child’s energy level and healthy food, they begin to understand the power of good nutrition.

Thinking back on many of the families she’s encountered, Allison remembers one mother who had three kids attending Project Reflect. Learning more about what her children were eating helped her appreciate the importance of fruits, vegetables and other staples in a healthy life.

Thanks to you, this mother’s children — and countless more boys and girls across our community — can receive food and develop healthy habits for a brighter future. Because she sees the impact this food can make, Allison wants you to know that she’s grateful for your partnership in the work we’re all doing to feed hungry children this summer.

“On behalf of our staff, students and families, I want to express my appreciation,” Allison says.
