Dear Friend,

At school, free and reduced-price meal programs provide a safety net for children. But with those programs on hold during summer break, our local kids are at serious risk of hunger.

As I prepare for my last Hunger Free Summer campaign and my June 30 retirement, I’ve spent some time reflecting on my 31 years here at Second Harvest.

When I first started, I met two young parents who were struggling with job loss. Both had master’s degrees, but there was a loss. Both had master’s degrees, but there was a.

I feel so confident leaving my leadership role at this moment because Second Harvest’s compassionate staff understand hunger and are driven to solve it.

I’m truly grateful we have the resources and ability to help ensure people have good, nutritious food on the table.

Thank you for the faith you’ve put in Second Harvest. You are the heart and soul of the work we do, and it wouldn’t be possible without you.

Please continue your commitment to Second Harvest as we begin this new chapter.

All my best,

Jaynee K. Day

You Make Amazing Things Possible

You’re Filling Kids’ Plates

Thanks to friends like you, our partners can feed children who might otherwise go hungry in the summer when free school meals are unavailable.

One such agency — Project Reflect — is reaching kids in Madison with the healthy food they need to thrive this summer.

Sister Mary has managed Project Reflect’s meal program for two decades and sees firsthand the difference made by your generous support.

She says many of the kids she serves don’t have much support and are at risk of falling behind in school.

The meals don’t just nourish kids’ minds and bodies. The meals also provide a sense of security, because the kids know where their next meal is coming from. Sister Mary says the food you provide also gives children energy to focus on activities and their studies.

“Because of the healthier meals, they’re all able to pay attention and understand what is being taught at school,” she says of the program’s impact.

Project Reflect partners with Second Harvest to provide evening meals during the school year and a nutritious breakfast and lunch during the summer months. If struggling parents aren’t able to afford the program’s small weekly fee, they can cover the cost with volunteer hours.

If it weren’t for your support, Second Harvest wouldn’t be able to fill children’s plates with fresh, healthy food through important partners like Project Reflect. Thank you for helping feed hungry children!

“Because of the healthier meals, they’re able to pay attention and understand what is being taught at school.”

Thank You for Fighting Summer Hunger!
New Neighbors Are Fighting Hunger

Second Harvest relies on support from our caring community to ensure all the food donations we receive reach the people in our service area who need them most. Our dedicated friends from the New Neighbors League of Nashville have been generously giving time at Second Harvest since September 2012.

New Neighbors works to help folks who’ve recently moved to the Nashville area get acquainted with the city. Marilyn Cornish has spearheaded the group’s volunteer efforts, and over the years, they’ve accumulated a total of 1,772 hours at Second Harvest!

Each month, anywhere from six to 25 New Neighbors members — and their friends and family — visit Second Harvest to sort and package food. They also help pack bags of kid-friendly snacks for the Backpack Program so students have enough to eat over the weekend.

Helping alleviate childhood hunger is very important to Marilyn. She knows many kids at her church receive meals through Second Harvest programs, and it gives her peace of mind to know these children have healthy food to help them learn and grow.

“‘These kids come in, and I know how hungry they are at the end of the school day,’” Marilyn says. “‘They’re getting meals from Second Harvest.’”

Members of New Neighbors appreciate how easy it is to make a difference through their volunteer efforts. They want to give back to their community, and they always look forward to hearing about their impact at the end of their shifts.

“It’s a great feeling when you finish,” Marilyn says. “They tell you how much food you have sorted, and you know how many families that will affect.”

We are so grateful to our friends from New Neighbors for their commitment to the fight against hunger here in Middle Tennessee. Thank you for your partnership in ensuring your community is fed!

Where There’s a Will, There’s a Way

As a person with strong core values, Corey Chatis decided to plan her estate at a young age. That way she could make certain her hard-earned assets benefit the causes she cares about most.

When deciding which nonprofits to include in her will, the Nashville woman had two criteria: 1) Their missions had to align closely to her values, and 2) they had to be run efficiently so her funds can do the most good.

Second Harvest met both criteria and was a natural fit since Corey knew the Food Bank well as both a volunteer and a donor.

“I know my gift will help local people in need and will be used strategically to have the greatest impact,” she says.

Your Gifts Feed Children in Gallatin

“Just to see those kids when they don’t have breakfast … they don’t function well,” says Onnesia Head, camp director at Gallatin Shalom Zone.

The free summer camp at Shalom Zone offers breakfast, lunch, and enriching activities for 65 local boys and girls throughout the month of June. Second Harvest provides breakfast during camp, and lunch for the rest of summer.

Because Onnesia works as a teacher during the school year, she understands the vital connection between nutrition and learning. She says kids are able to think more clearly when they’ve had a balanced meal. After a nutritious breakfast, the children she serves have energy to participate in the day’s programming.

Shalom Zone is in a low-income area of Gallatin, where Onnesia says there are many families in need. Parents often tell her they’re struggling to afford groceries and express their gratitude for help feeding their kids.

Hungry children simply can’t thrive. By supporting childhood hunger relief during the summer, you’re preparing kids for success when classes resume in the fall.

“A huge thank you,” Onnesia says. “I don’t know where the parents would be without this.”

Thank you for fighting hunger here in Middle Tennessee. You’re laying the foundation for our community’s bright future through your generous support!

Second Harvest Food Bank of Middle Tennessee Capital Campaign

We have a plan to close the 34 million meal gap by 2025 in Middle and West TN. The plan hinges on increasing our efficiency by converting to a hub-and-spoke distribution system. Here’s why that’s important:

Capacity
Roughly 50% of produce is thrown away across the country. With more storage space, we can rescue more food from grocery stores, food manufacturers, and farmers, and make it accessible to the people who need it most.

Proximity
For a person staring at empty cupboards, help can’t come fast enough. We’re shortening the path from food source to client by adding locations in Benton and Rutherford counties.

Community Engagement
Being in more communities makes it easier for volunteers outside the Nashville area to work with us and help their local communities. A larger pool of volunteers will save money for Second Harvest, meaning those funds can go directly toward getting food to hungry neighbors.

Our Plan for a Stronger Tennessee

We’ve made a lot of progress together. But there are still 34 million meals missing from tables in Middle and West Tennessee annually. We can’t leave these people behind. Your support of our capital campaign is essential to close that meal gap.

A New Way to Work
Second Harvest formerly relied on a distribution system that would transfer food from one point to the next — a basic point-to-point delivery of food.

We’re adopting a hub-and-spoke distribution method, which improves food delivery to our clients, increases efficiency, reduces costs and waste, and boosts grocery rescue.

Farewell, Jaynee!

Jaynee K. Day has led Second Harvest since 1988. She has slept in the warehouse to protect food from looters. She has mobilized large-scale community response during emergencies such as the 2010 flood. But most of those 31 years have been spent doggedly pounding the pavement, advocating for our hungry neighbors.

She may be retiring, but her spirit, commitment, and tenacity will continue to inspire us all. Thank you, Jaynee, for giving so much of yourself to Middle Tennessee. We are all better for it.

A LOOK BACK

But most of those 31 years have been spent doggedly pounding the pavement, advocating for our hungry neighbors.

She may be retiring, but her spirit, commitment, and tenacity will continue to inspire us all. Thank you, Jaynee, for giving so much of yourself to Middle Tennessee. We are all better for it.

Not all food is equal. Jaynee led the charge to increase clients' access to nutritious food—especially fresh produce. This included launching Mobile Pantries, which help more than 160,000 people annually.

When Jaynee started at Second Harvest in 1988, she led a full-time staff of less than ten (compared to more than 100 today).

After the Gulf War ended in 1991, the military donated enormous amounts of leftover canned tomato paste. Jaynee worked with Vietti Foods to invent Project Preserve, turning that paste into tomato soup. Today, Project Preserve supplies nutritious food to 180 food banks nationwide.

Jaynee's legacy includes the current capital campaign to fund distribution centers in Smyrna and Camden, and expand the Nashville facility.

Whether she's on stage at the Ryman Auditorium or in a one-on-one meeting, Jaynee's passion for feeding hungry people always shines through.
Second Harvest is so grateful for last quarter’s extensive community support. Thanks to all of you for your volunteer hours, financial contributions, and donated food, goods, and services!
